ABOUT THE SUMMIT

Where Disagreement becomes Progress

The questions surrounding impact: how to measure it, how to finance it, and how to translate it into policy are among the most pressing of our time. They are also deeply intertwined. Finance cannot work in isolation from policy, research without practice remains incomplete, and real change requires the courage to hold genuinely different perspectives in the same room.

"Too often, debates about impact remain siloed within communities that already agree with one another. This summit aspires to be something different: a place where honest, respectful exchange moves the conversation forward."

The Solvay Impact Institute First Summit brings together academics, practitioners, investors, policymakers, students, philanthropists and nonprofit leaders for a single intensive day of structured debate and cross-sector dialogue. By design, it does not seek consensus at the cost of clarity, it seeks productive disagreement as a driver of genuine insight.

From Dialogue to Action

Documented takeaways and a post-event impact report will translate the day's discussions into actionable insights, strategic frameworks, and policy recommendations carried back into organisations, research, and governance.

Built for Cross-Pollination

Real progress happens at the intersection of communities. The summit's architecture, three tracks, two plenaries, one keynote, is designed so that every session puts distinct languages, metrics and priorities in genuine dialogue.

This panel, moderated by Marek Hudon, brings together leading figures from Belgium's entrepreneurial and impact ecosystem to explore how private and public actors drive innovation, social value, and systemic change.

Speakers include Jan Haemers (CEO, Haemers Technologies Group), Muriel Bernard (CEO, BeCentral and Founder of eFarmz), Isabelle Grippa (CEO, hub.brussels), as well as Alexandre Helson (Co-CEO Chief Spectaculoos Officer, Maison Dandoy) & Martin Ophoven (Cultural shifter, SEMod). Additional contributors may include prominent impact-driven entrepreneurs active in Belgium. Together, they will discuss how entrepreneurship, across sectors and organisational models, can generate societal impact, address public challenges, and shape new forms of value creation.

HIGHER EDUCATION

The Solvay Impact Institute acts as a catalyst between higher education and research

In 1903, the Solvay Business School was founded in response to the defining challenge of its era: to supply the talented managers Belgium needed to sustain its industrial boom and secure its standing on the international stage at the dawn of the 20th century. Ernest Solvay's pioneering vision, brought to life within ULB and VUB, became a powerful engine for teaching and research in the management sciences.

As we enter the second quarter of the 21st century, the challenges confronting business schools have changed in nature, yet they continue to demand boldness and creativity across teaching, research and service to society. Amid profound social and environmental transformation, in a world that grows ever harder to decipher, the traditional model of the business school must give way to a new one. Expectations are high: business schools are now called upon to help students uncover their higher purpose and to cultivate it alongside the competences they need to become conscious societal leaders, researchers and doers who turn ideas into impact.

The Solvay Impact Institute builds on the distinctive strengths cultivated in the Master in Business Engineering, a programme whose rare blend of managerial and scientific competences equips graduates to step in as the connecting link the innovation ecosystem so often lacks — ready to understand, foster and channel much-needed innovations toward the investors, managers and leaders who can bring them to life and scale them up. Within this model, field projects, business cases and master's research become the antechamber to longer-term, sustained research carried out with partner firms, funds, NGOs and the public sector. The Institute thus acts as a catalyst, demonstrating that, within a business school, higher education, its real-world application and academic research can belong to a single, symbiotic ecosystem — in all its diversity.

2025-2026

The Research Centers behind the Solvay Impact Institute

The summit draws on decades of rigorous research from four leading institutes at Solvay Brussels School, each bringing distinct expertise, common ambition, and a shared commitment to evidence-based, socially relevant knowledge.

CEBRIG

CENTRE EMILE BERNHEIM FOR INTERDISCIPLINARY RESEARCH IN MANAGEMENT

The interdisciplinary heart of Solvay research, structured around eight areas spanning finance, strategy, governance, human resources, economic history and innovation. CEBRIG coordinates the PhD programme in management sciences and brings together Regular and Associate Fellows across disciplines.

FINANCE	STRATEGY	GOVERNANCE
HR & LABOUR	INNOVATION

DULBEA

DEPARTEMENT D'ECONOMIE APPLIQUEE - ULB

Since 1956, DULBEA has been the applied economics reference for Belgian governments and institutions. With decades of advisory contracts at national and regional level, DULBEA excels at translating rigorous microeconomic analysis into actionable policy, on health, gender, labour, and regional development.

APPLIED MICRO	HEALTH ECON	LABOUR
GENDER	POLICY

CERMi

CENTRE FOR EUROPEAN RESEARCH IN MICROFINANCE (MEMBER OF THE CEBRIG)

A pioneer in the scientific study of microfinance, financial inclusion and social performance. CERMi investigates both at ULB and UMONS how financial tools can empower excluded populations and what evidence demonstrates real social impact, connecting academic rigour with the practitioner world of impact investing and social finance.

MICROFINANCE	FINANCIAL INCLUSION
SOCIAL PERFORMANCE

CEESE

CENTRE FOR ECONOMIC & SOCIAL STUDIES OF THE ENVIRONMENT (MEMBER OF THE CEBRIG)

Founded in 1972 after the Stockholm UN Conference, CEESSE is a multidisciplinary research team analysing economy–society–environment interactions. Its work includes the assessment of externalities and the development of analytical tools such as cost–benefit analysis and life cycle approaches.

ENERGY TRANSITION	JUST TRANSITION
SUSTAINABLE FINANCE	SUSTAINABILITY

The summit is designed so that each track and plenary session explicitly connects themes across institutes, linking financial evidence to policy recommendations, microfinance insights to welfare pricing, and environmental transitions to governance frameworks.
